

Alice Conklin (left), Associate Professor of History, introduces Caroline Ford, Professor of History at the University of California-Los Angeles, on May 8, 2009, at the Mershon Center for International Security Studies.

Caroline Ford, Professor of History at University of California-Los Angeles, spoke on "France's New Museums in a Postcolonial Age" on May 8, 2009, at the Mershon Center for International Security Studies.

Dorothy Noyes (far right), poses a question to Caroline Ford after her talk on "France's New Museums in a Postcolonial Age."

Caroline Ford discussed three new museums built in France or its territories: Quai Branly in Paris, the Centre Culturel Tjibaou in New Caledonia, and the Maison des Civilisations et de l'Unité Réunionnaise.

Julian Anderson of Creative Writing talks with Caroline Ford after Ford's presentation on "France's New Museums in a Postcolonial Age" on May 8, 2009, at the Mershon Center.